The king is adamant about filling the wedding hall with guests. His initial guest list has been carefully drawn up, but when these invited guests do not come, the king sends his servants out to invite anyone and everyone—the “bad and good alike.” The hall must be filled. There can be no real feast with only a partially filled hall—the joy and happiness of the feast must be full. In the same manner as the people parable king, God persistently invites us to the royal banquet in the “kingdom of heaven.”
